WATER LILIES AND JAPANESE BRIDGE by Claude Monet Cover Art - Water Lilies and Japanese Bridge (1899) Notebook ideal for daily use - Take notes, scribble your thoughts, doodle, journal Makes for a unique gift idea for art lovers Plain Unruled / Unlined - 100 pages - 8.5 " x 11" (Large) About the Artist Oscar-Claude Monet (14 November 1840 - 5 December 1926) was a French painter, a founder of French Impressionist painting and the most consistent and prolific practitioner of the movement's philosophy of expressing one's perceptions before nature, especially as applied to plein air landscape painting. The term "Impressionism" is derived from the title of his painting Impression, soleil levant (Impression, Sunrise), which was exhibited in 1874 in the first of the independent exhibitions mounted by Monet and his associates as an alternative to the Salon de Paris. Water Lilies and Japanese Bridge represents two of Monet's greatest achievements: his gardens at Giverny and the series of paintings they inspired. In 1883 the artist moved to this country town, near Paris but just across the border of Normandy, and immediately began to redesign the property. In 1893, Monet purchased an adjacent tract, which included a small brook, and transformed the site into an Asian-inspired oasis of cool greens, exotic plants, and calm waters, enhanced by a Japanese footbridge. The serial approach embodied in this work--one of about a dozen paintings in which Monet returned to the same view under differing weather and light conditions--was one of his great formal innovations. He was committed to painting directly from nature as frequently as possible and whenever weather permitted, sometimes working on eight or more canvases in the same day. Monet's project to capture ever-shifting atmospheric conditions came to be a hallmark of the Impressionist style.
